

Transcript: Graduation vs. Commencement

[Opening scene – upbeat music plays]

Narrator: Alright, future grads! Let's clear up some confusion between graduation and commencement. These two terms sound similar, but they're actually very different.

Narrator: Graduation is the process of earning your degree. It's about completing your coursework and meeting the requirements to receive your diploma. To graduate, you need to apply for your diploma—make sure you check the deadlines and confirm that you've met all your requirements. Once everything's approved, you're officially a graduate!

Narrator: Commencement, on the other hand, is the big celebration. It's the ceremony where you walk across the stage, wear your cap and gown, and celebrate with friends and family. But here's the key: you must apply separately to participate in commencement. It's not automatic.

Narrator: So remember—apply for both to make the most of your big day!

[Closing scene – music fades out]
