

Student Stories: Angelica Fraustco

[BACKGROUND VOICES]

ANGELICA FRAUSTO: Lee and the people that work here at WSU, they're so helpful with everything that I had. It was a really easy transition to go from classroom to DDP with that. So, I would definitely recommend it. I liked learning so much about individuals, about just different areas such as psychology, sociology, human development. I like that it was so diverse.

Here somewhere? Oh, under-- oh, gotcha. And under, I just attach it somewhere?

I feel it helps me a lot more with people. Well, like for instance, I work right now as a financial counselor for [INAUDIBLE] Community Hospital. And I do self-pay. So I get the worst end of it. I have to call people and say, you know, you haven't made a payment in so many months. Could we get that? And I just have to have more patience. I'm more understanding on their different situations. I'm more able to listen to them and help them out in those areas.

I felt that a lot of the professors were very good at getting back to me when I had questions. They would help me out with anything. If they couldn't answer it, they'd give me a number, a name of somebody else who could help me, and very understanding with technical issues if I did happen to have those. And so, yeah, I didn't have any problems. It was wonderful.

SPEAKER 1: Oh, I love your hair.

ANGELICA FRAUSTO: Oh, thank you. The wind kind of was like, er, er, kind of everywhere.

I think the flexibility has to be my favorite part. You know, usually with finals and different quizzes, you have from a Monday to a Sunday to do it. And it works well with my schedule. And that's something that I love. I don't have to be at class at 5:00 PM Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays til 8:800. And so that's what I liked about it the most, the stability.

SPEAKER 2: Would you mind, there are the lyrics.

ANGELICA FRAUSTO: OK. OK, just let me know if I'm out of tune. (SINGING) Fight, fight, fight, for Washington State. Win the victory.

[APPLAUSE]

Did I do bad?

[LAUGHTER]

[MUSIC - "WASHINGTON STATE FIGHT SONG"] So fight, fight, fight, for Washington State and victory.
