

Student Stories: Ruth Hagwood

RUTH HAGWOOD: I almost feel like I have a closer relationship with the instructor, because I can ask them a question and develop a more personal relationship than I may be able to do in a classroom of 100 other people. Then, I found that I was able to connect with other students that weren't living in my vicinity that maybe were living in other states, which was exciting, as well. And by working together in a group or a team and having to put projects together with people that you can only communicate to over the phone or over the internet, it was amazing to find out what could be accomplished.
